

REVIEWER'S REPORT

Manuscript No.: JNBMS-066

Title: SUPPLY CHAIN RESILIENCE AND BUSINESS CONTINUITY: STRATEGIES FOR MANAGING DISRUPTIONS IN MODERN ORGANIZATIONS.

Recommendation:

Accept as it is

Accept after minor revision.....

Accept after major revision

Do not accept (Reasons below)

Rating	Excel.	Good	Fair	Poor
Originality		—
Techn. Quality		—
Clarity	—
Significance	—

Reviewer Id: JPR-225

Reviewer's Comment for Publication.

The manuscript presents a clear and practically relevant overview of supply chain resilience and business continuity, addressing important risks such as supplier dependence, transportation disruptions, demand uncertainty, and information gaps. The discussion of supplier diversification, safety-stock planning, scenario analysis, alternative sourcing, digital monitoring, information sharing, and contingency planning provides useful guidance for organizations seeking to improve their ability to respond to disruptions. The paper also appropriately emphasizes the trade-off between operational efficiency and resilience and recognizes the importance of coordination among purchasing, operations, finance, suppliers, and customer-service functions. However, the literature base is relatively limited and should be expanded with more recent empirical studies addressing contemporary supply-chain disruptions, digital technologies, geopolitical risks, and resilience measurement. The methodology would also benefit from clearer information regarding the literature search strategy and selection criteria, while a more detailed comparative analysis of resilience strategies and their costs, benefits, and applicability across different organizational contexts would strengthen the academic contribution. Overall, the manuscript addresses an important management issue and is suitable for publication after minor revision.