Detailed Reviewer's Report

This paper shows sincere effort and wide reading in classical Islamic jurisprudence on testimony and the challenging of witnesses, drawing from important sources across the Hanafi, Maliki, Shafi'i and Hanbali schools and engaging with a meaningful issue in judicial procedure. The author demonstrates a good understanding of juristic discussions and brings together valuable material relevant to the topic. However, the paper would benefit from clearer organisation into well-defined sections, reduced reliance on long quotations with more explanation in the author's own words and careful editing to remove repetition and make the central argument easier to follow.
