Detailed Reviewer's Report

The topic chosen for discussion in the research paper is highly significant and relevant in the modern world. The study discusses the issue of human trafficking, with particular emphasis on the ways the security forces of India respond to it. Primary data obtained from the members of security services constitutes one of the key strengths of the research paper. The concept of the "Capacity Building Paradox" is an interesting one, and it does bring out the significant disparity between how critical training is deemed and how rarely it happens. This research paper does well to focus on victim-centered and trauma-informed policing.

Improvements that would make the paper better include clarifying the key idea, such as the "Capacity Building Paradox". The paper would benefit from presenting the results in an organised manner so that it becomes easier for the reader to comprehend how the data, analysis and conclusions relate. In addition, the paper needs to be simplified in terms of both language and organisation, with fewer repetitions.
