Reviewer's Comment for Publication.

The manuscript presents a relevant review of Amlapitta from Ayurvedic classical texts and appropriately correlates it with modern gastrointestinal disorders such as hyperacidity, gastritis, and GERD. The topic is meaningful and has clinical relevance, especially in the context of increasing lifestyle-related digestive disorders.

However, the manuscript requires improvement in several areas before publication:

1. Language and Grammar: The text contains multiple grammatical errors, typographical mistakes, and inconsistent formatting that reduce readability. Careful proofreading and editing are necessary.
2. Structure and Formatting: Headings, tables, and citations are not consistently formatted. The manuscript should follow a uniform academic structure.
3. Referencing Style: Citations are mentioned but not properly formatted or consistently linked to a standard referencing style.
4. Scientific Clarity: Some sections, especially samprapti and symptom correlation, would benefit from clearer explanation and better logical flow.
5. Redundancy: Certain points are repetitive and could be condensed for better conciseness.

The manuscript has good potential and covers important Ayurvedic concepts, but requires minor revision focusing on language refinement, formatting consistency, and improved presentation clarity.
