Detailed Reviewer's Report

1. The manuscript addresses an important and relevant issue concerning the current status and development constraints of fish farming in the Savannah Region of Togo. The study presents useful field-based information on farm characteristics, production systems, technical constraints, and aquaculture potential.
2. However, the manuscript would benefit from careful language and grammatical revision, clarification of some methodological and statistical details, and improved presentation of tables and figures. The discussion should also provide stronger comparisons with recent studies from Togo and other West African countries.
3. In addition, the authors should ensure consistency between the French and English abstracts, verify all percentages and sample sizes, and strengthen the recommendations based on the findings.
4. Overall, the study has practical value, but some revisions are required to improve its scientific clarity and presentation.
